

Strathroy Dairy

Strathroy

Background

The Strathroy name was first used on premium dairy products in 1923. The progressive Omagh based Dairy continues to operate as a family business and is committed to producing and distributing premium dairy products including fresh milk, cream and buttermilk throughout the island of Ireland.

Processing is subject to the most stringent of controls. From the intake of traceable milk to the delivery of temperature controlled finished product, every stage is HACCP controlled, earning Strathroy the approval of all statutory bodies.

The first company in Ireland to introduce plastic jars into the dairy industry, Strathroy Dairy is committed to continuously developing innovative packaging solutions for its customers.

Since its recent re-launch in a new re-sealable jar, Strathroy's Fresh Cream has been listed by both ASDA and Tesco in the new 250ml and 500ml re-sealable jars. The company has also recently re-launched its range of Ayreshire's Milk with a new black label, highlighting the Premium nature of the product. Ayreshires Milk was previously sold under the Erganagh brand. Premium Ayreshires Milk is generally regarded as the ideal drinking milk, due to its higher quality and smoother texture.
