

Corndale Farm

Chilled Fresh

Background

Corndale Farm, a pioneer of chorizo, salami and other cured meats was established in 2012 by Alastair Crown, with the aim of producing top-quality pork products from his herd of rare-breed, free-range pigs.

Corndale has recently moved into and kitted out a new 3,000 sq ft factory close to its existing free-range pig farm in the picturesque area of Myroe in Co Derry. This investment will enable the company to triple processing capability of its multi-award winning cured meats and includes the latest processing, air drying, maturing, storage and vacuum packaging systems for its wide range of charcuterie in line with stringent food hygiene rules.

The current portfolio also includes chorizo beer sticks, varieties of fennel, garlic and black pepper, and venison salami, as well as coppa, nduja, lomo and bresaola, usually associated with butchery businesses in France, Spain and Italy, as well air-dried Irish Dexter meat.

In addition, Alastair has invested in his existing free-range pig farm to ensure an increase in the supply of premium meat for the expanded processing operation.

Two award-winning Northern Ireland based food producers Craic Foods and Corndale Farm have collaborated to launch an exciting new Nduja Ketchup under the Corndale Farm brand.

in March 23, Alastair launched a uniquely sweet piquant ketchup blended with Corndale's smoky, spicy 'Nduja under the Corndale Farm brand which he created along with Paul Clarke of Craic Foods.

The company has won a string of awards including UK Great Taste and British Charcuterie Live recognition.
