

Hillstown Farm Brewing Company

Ambient Chilled

Background

Hillstown Brewery was created following the success of Hillstown Farmshop and Geterbrewed's collaboration in creating Beer Fed Beef.

The initial brewery which is based on a family farm near Randalstown in county Antrim, was for agricultural use feeding cattle until the owners decided to expand into the exciting craft beer sector.

The brewery produces a unique range of craft beers. All the brewing operations are carried out on the farm and can be seen by visitors.

A new and experienced master brewer, Alistair Thompson has been appointed. An eye-catching re-banding of the beers has also just been completed.

The innovative brewery teamed up with a coffee business to launch Pamoja, an original beer in cans featuring a new identity. It has since added a second canned beer using its established Henrietta the Hen, a Californian style pale ale.

In April, the team at Hillstown Brewery announced that they will be creating Northern Ireland's first museum of craft brewing. They have won backing from the international Économusée network to create a 'working museum' that showcases artisans at work.
