Chilled

Background

Finnebrogue Artisan is a name synonymous with good food. It started as a producer of superb venison but has since branched out into other meat products and plant-based alternatives.

Finnebrogue always looks at what is wrong with food to figure out how to make it the best it can be, without being bound by the way it has always been done. That kind of innovative thinking has led to multiple awards, nationwide acclaim and has established the firm as the UK's leading premium sausage manufacturer.

As well as supplying most of the UK's major supermarkets under their own private labels, Finnebrogue's own Naked brand has been a huge success story since it launched in 2018. Naked Bacon is now Britain's biggest bacon brand. They are the first mass produced rashers to be made without nitrites, which have been shown to be carcinogenic when used to produce processed meats.

The business has progressed rapidly in recent years. Its restless drive for innovation has been the cornerstone of its success, with turnover growing from £3 million in 2009 to a projected £149.5 million by 2021.

The business uses local suppliers including Karro Food Group, Linden Foods, Moy Park, Dale Farm, Mash Direct and PGI Armagh Bramley apples. Customers can enjoy products sold under the Finnebrogue brand, selected retailer's own-label and in restaurants across Northern Ireland and the rest of the UK.

Recent innovation has seen Finnebrogue launch of a number new stuffing products into Marks & Spencer stores.

In January 2018, Finnebrogue launched 'Naked Bacon' - the first to be completely free from nitrites, preservatives, E numbers and all allergens. The company worked with Spanish chemists to produce the world's first nitrate-free Naked Bacon and is the outcome of research conducted over ten years. The new natural flavouring being used is produced from natural Mediterranean fruit and spice extracts and crucially, in independent blind taste tests, consumers said it was as good or better than traditionally cured meat. Finnebrogue will shortly launch ham and pork sausages also free from nitrites.
